article of the week:
"Is The Great Wealth Transfer A Mirage?"

Trusts & Estates

Summary: The article, authored by Evan Cooper, examines the prevailing financial industry narrative surrounding the "Great Wealth Transfer"—the massive, anticipated handover of assets from Baby Boomers to their heirs. Cooper challenges the assumption that this will be a straightforward, massive migration of wealth. He argues that the projected figures are often based on overly simplistic models that fail to account for the reality of modern retirement, where Boomers are living longer, spending more on healthcare and long-term care, and increasingly consuming their own capital rather than preserving it for an inheritance.

Cooper emphasizes that for many wealth managers, the expectation of a "guaranteed" windfall from the next generation is a dangerous strategic gamble. Instead of waiting for a wealth transfer that may be significantly smaller or more fragmented than predicted, he suggests that firms should focus on the complexities of intergenerational planning today. By understanding the actual spending patterns of their aging clients and building meaningful relationships with heirs early on, advisors can better navigate the realities of longevity and avoid basing their business models on a demographic myth..

Notes:

Fri, Jul 3 is the day the financial markets are celebrating the Fourth of July holiday and they will be closed. Our office will be closed as well but all online services will still be available.

Helpful hint of the week:
"Valuing foreign securities in $US"

Sometimes, our clients ask us to price securities traded on non-US exchanges. In these situations, the values reported on APPRAISE valuations are in $US. We convert from the foreign currency.
